Mountainman Conn Olds prepares for another year of Christmas by providing thousands of the trees used to decorate homes and businesses. He says he cuts trees from all over the mountain.

Christmas trees just 'way of life'

A local mountainman, cutting Christmas trees is a way of life. In Olds, 405 S. 900 East, said his been cutting trees for the 19 years. "Cutting Christmas trees is a three-month job," he said. "I did for permits in September, access roads in October and then down before Thanksgiving."

Olds said Christmas seems to be coming earlier every year. "We start cutting trees Thanksgiving Day and sell businesses want them up to employees and customers back from the holidays."

Olds said he cuts trees from all over the mountain west. "We go to Montana, Nevada, Colorado and even Utah," he said. "I'm a real mountainman. I enjoy getting out in the wilderness."

Trees are selling for around $1.50 a foot this year, Olds said. "Each year we sell thousands of trees. We just put them up on my lot and people come by every year to pick the 'perfect' tree."

Between Christmases, Olds cuts wood for a living.

'Crisis' strikes peace talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat described the Middle East peace talks Wednesday as being in a state of "serious crisis" and raised the possibility of a suspension to allow Egypt and Israel time to consider their positions.

Informed Egyptian sources said their government has formulated new proposals designed to avoid a total deadlock in the Washington peace treaty talks that still hold to Egypt's primary demands.

The White House said President Carter met with Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman on Tuesday to ask Israel to wait until Egypt's new position is clear before making any decisions.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli Cabinet cut short its review of the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations to await clarification of the new proposals.

tiularly over a report that Sadat was demanding the "return" of the Gaza Strip. Egypt controlled the territory from 1948 to 1967, when it was captured by Israel.

Sadat, harshly criticized by some Arab states for ignoring the Palestinians, has insisted that a link be made. Because of Israel's rejection of Egyptian demands thus far, the sources said, Sadat was trying to deal with Gaza first, leaving the West Bank for later.

It is less emotional for them than the West Bank," one source said. "It would be easier to implement steps in Gaza than in the West Bank."

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told reporters after a three-hour Cabinet session, "according to the latest reports received, Egypt is about to submit new proposals and demands related to the negotiations between the two countries. These reports are not yet official and complete."

In view of this fact, the Cabinet decided to hold the political debate after it has received all the necessary clarifications concerning the additional positions of Egypt."

U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis, however, said after calling on Begin, that the Washington talks were continuing and "there is no crisis."

President Carter will be briefed on the Egyptian suggestions by Vice President Hosni Mubarak, who Sadat dispatched to Washington on Wednesday, the Egyptian sources said.

In Damascus, Syrian President Hafez Assad of Syria vowed that "Syria and the Arab nations will save the Egyptian people from the shameful position to which it has been dragged by its rulers."

In a speech before the annual Syrian trade union congress, Assad said Israel and Egypt "can sign any agreements they want, bilateral or otherwise, but such agreements will not bring peace to the Middle East because peace cannot be established without us."

There was no indication in Jerusalem as to when the Cabinet would resume its discussions. The Cabinet had met to take up a new U.S. proposal designed to break the snags in the Washington talks.

The Israeli press reported the Arabonies have suggested that one link would be to call for elections in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip not later than December 1979.

Overcrowding in prison shows need for expansion

Editor's note: This is the final article in a series on Utah State Prison: From cesspool or road to rehabilitation. Universe reporters Randall Edwards, Dave Heylen, Tracy Mower and Barbara Murphy interviewed dozens of sources inside and outside the prison to research the series.

On Nov. 3, the Utah State Penitentiary hit an all-time population high of more than 950 inmates. Since August 1974, the inmate population has shown a dramatic, steady increase.

This increase has brought to the attention of prison officials the need for prison expansion in the immediate future.

"Medium Security houses 500 inmates and all our facilities are full and have been for months," said Larry Morris, Utah State Prison warden.

"Minimum has 15 dorms and was built for 150 inmates. It functions smoothly at that number," Morris said. "Now we have 315. We are far in excess of the capacity it was designed for."

The prison's security problems are aggravated by the overcrowded condition, and according to prison administrators, has caused the large number of inmate escapes.

Prison officials say the situation has forced the prison to shuffle inmates to Minimum Security before they were prepared.

"As the institution grew in size we decided to use the Minimum Security more," says William Milliken, director of the Division of Corrections. "Having an overcrowded situation in Medium Security is very dangerous. It is a very tense situation."

To meet the needs of a growing prison, various alternatives have been suggested.

Among these are renovating the existing prison, building a new prison south of Draper, or setting up a system of satellite prisons of 60 inmates throughout the state, with the Point of the Mountain being the main security prison.

Realizing the rapid increase in the inmate population, the new Prison Special Session of the 42nd Legislature requested a task force be created to develop a policy plan for Utah's criminal justice system.

The Blue Ribbon Task Force on Criminal Justice, composed of representatives from the executive, judicial and legislative branches of government, was given the assignment to develop a master plan for state criminal justice, with emphasis on the correction system.

Last week the Task Force forwarded to the legislature its report, which took a year to prepare. It recommended the crowded conditions be remedied by renovating the Utah State Prison at its current capacity level, and by developing small, community-based facilities. The idea is supported in a Department of Corrections report.

"The Board of Corrections has adopted a policy that the prison be no larger than 1,100 inmates," Milliken said. "Our plan calls for satellite institutions, or in other words 'halfway houses,' to be built throughout the state."

According to Milliken, the immediate plans are for four satellite prisons. "Two of them will be located within Salt Lake City, while one will be of Salt Lake and one south."

The director said the exact location will depend on where the majority of prisoners come from.

"This type of prison (those built for 60) are easier to manage," Morris said. "What we are looking at in the future is a series of regional 60-bed prisons around the state."

"Basically, these community correction centers will be halfway houses used as a center to re-acquaint the prisoners with their family and environment," Milliken said.

Attorney General Robert Hansen said, "I think that modular units, separated, would be more effective than the system we presently have. It's psychologically bad to put the worst guys in the same facility as the other guys."

The advantage of satellite prisons, Milliken added, is that the prisoner has the chance to repay the victims of his crime. "Through the restitution program an inmate would work at a regular wage, which would help get his personal family off welfare."

According to Milliken, a federal class action suit has been filed by the inmates and joined by the U.S. Department of Justice against the prison administration. The director said the suit is broken down into 20 different areas, including medical and prison building problems.

Bread tickets on sale until concert begins

Tickets for Bread in concert will be on sale until the show begins tonight at the Marriott Center. A crowd in excess of 10,000 is expected for the 8 p.m. show, according to a Social Office spokesman.

The winner of a $1,750 stereo system will be announced at the concert after a drawing to decide the winner from among 10 eligible BYU students, the spokesman said. He said the students qualified by finding leaves of bread hidden on campus.

Solo artist Ian Mathews, who records under the Mushroom Records label, will be the front act for Bread. The concert marks Bread's first return to BYU since March 1977. That concert drew 13,500 fans and was one of the group's first after they reunited in 1976.

Since their original formation in 1969, the group has established itself with a long string of hits such as, "Make It With You," "Baby, I'm A Want You," "Everything I Own," "Diary" and "Guitar Man."

They received gold records for seven of their albums, including their 1977 "reformation" record, "Lost Without Your Love."

The Social Office reported good student participation in the stereo contest, the first of its kind at BYU.

Famed anthropologist dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Margaret Mead, famed American anthropologist, died Wednesday at New York Hospital after a year-long battle with cancer. She was 76.

In her books and lectures, Miss Mead spoke to a public much wider than the scientific community. She moved to the forefront of her profession by publishing in 1928, at age 26, what has become one of the most widely read pieces of scholarship ever penned, "Coming of Age in Samoa." The study of adolescence and passage to sexual maturity was based on a field trip to the island she undertook three years earlier.

In addition to relating the visit with Smith and Cowdery, Mormon scriptures also say John the Baptist was with Christ in his resurrection.

State hospital land

Beltway to get further study

A proposal by Provo City Wednesday to construct a $100,000 "beltway" on Utah State Hospital land to relieve 9th East congestion, was presented to a task force for further study.

Members of the Utah State Board of Mental Health will study proposals for the road, which would be built on the hillside behind the main hospital facilities and in front of "The Castle," a hospital recreation facility.

Originally, this road was proposed to connect all the cities in Utah County along the foothills, said Leland A. Gamette, Provo City associate planner. "The public in general didn't feel it was a proper road, so in 1973 the city adopted it as a local collector route."

The proposal was first made by the city in a state board meeting Nov. 9 in Salt Lake City. At that time the board agreed to further examine the item in meetings to be held with the city and the state hospital.

The road was originally called Bonneville Drive. After the proposal failed, it was redesigned to be an "interrupted" road, with stop signs and jogs. The road would also connect the Cinnamon Hills subdivision with development north of the hospital and help serve Heritage Mountain. The city, he said, does not want the road specifically for the Heritage Mountain project.

"The road is being developed as the development occurs," he said. "We now have two sections on both sides of the hospital which are being developed. We're talking about how to economically and ecologically connect them in the best way."

After the initial presentation by city representatives, board members asked about legal leases and the ownership of land and for details about access and privacy plans between the proposed beltway and the recreation area above the hospital administration building.

Provo City proposed that the beltway could be "buffered" by use of shrubbery and trees on both sides of the road to screen the traffic from the Castle and the hospital's proposed new administration and multipurpose building. They also recommended that a fence be constructed along both sides of the beltway through the hospital property as a means of security.

The plans also allow for a pedestrian walkway to be constructed under the beltway to allow public and patient access to the Castle. Maintenance access to support facilities on the hillside would be by way of locked gates in the fence where the present road from the hospital crosses the beltway.

Board members expressed a lack of information concerning the legal means used in the development of Heritage Mountain and the proposed access roads.

The beltway will most likely not be built for another eight to 10 years, Gamette said. If the hospital rejects the proposed route, the city has an alternate route which will connect with Center Street and run along the southern edge of the hospital facilities.

However, with the alternate route the city has requested that the road leading to the base site of the Heritage Mountain project be moved further east so that the beltway and the Heritage road will align with one another.

"Patients are housed in the building alongside that road," said Francesca Marguardson, a member of the hospital board. "We're concerned that this would result in the road being just 44 feet from where disturbed patients are housed."

Greenwood said the board was not yet well-informed enough to make a decision about the proposal. "They're proposing cutting a road through some very valuable land," he said. "That's going quite a long way."

Norma Thomas, a board member from Provo, expressed her displeasure with the proposal. "I sincerely hope the board will not bow to the pressure of bureaucracy and big money and accept this proposal without careful study and full discussion."

"We're really concerned what effect the construction and use of the road may have on our building," said Tom Haraldson, public information officer for Utah State Hospital. "We're actually sitting site of a fault and we just don't know what might happen."

Dress consultant to lecture today

The author of "Dress for Success" for both men and women will speak at 10 a.m. today in the main ballroom of the Wilkinson Center.

John T. Molloy, a lecturer sponsored by the ASBYU Academics Office, will speak on the proper use of dress, said Ernest Richter, vice president of the Academics Office. Molloy, who Time magazine called "America's best-known clothing consultant," has written two books.

One is "Dress For Success, for Men," and a newly released, "Dress For Success, for Women."

About women, Molloy said, "American women dress for failure. They let the fashion industry influence their choice of business clothes; they still view themselves mainly as sex objects and they let their socioeconomic background influence their choice of clothing."

Molloy's books are based on years of research he has done about clothing that brings success in the business and social world. He said clothing is no substitute for ambition, intelligence and education, but they are essential in getting a person where he wants to go.

Molloy said clothes are important to a person's image in an office. "My research shows that if you're wearing a good suit, it is easier to give orders out," he said. Molloy is a nationally syndicated columnist and a leading wardrobe engineer and consultant on dress to many major companies. He has advised executives from General Motors, American Telephone and Telegraph, U.S. Steel, and Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith.

Although the final

"The intent in the

Kelshaw to honor rescuers

Two BYU students credited with saving the life of a coed, who was recently assaulted on campus, will be awarded certificates today by Robert Kelshaw, chief of BYU Security/Police.

The award will be presented at noon in the Varsity Theater during Sak Yak.

On Oct. 16 Karl Bruce Barksdale of Salt Lake City and Alan Taylor of Rigby, Idaho, were walking down the ramp at the southeast corner of the Smith Fieldhouse at about 10 p.m.

when they heard screams. They ran down the ramp and tackled a man who was fleeing after having attacked the coed. The two students held him down until Security officers arrived.

Barksdale and Taylor will be presented certificates for recognized achievement. The certificates have been signed by both Kelshaw and BYU President Dallin Oaks.

Also during the program a slide presentation will be shown on the security program.

Westridge' OK'd by Provo board

Provo School District Board Tuesday night unanimously approved the name "Westridge Elementary" for a new school to be built on the east side of the city.

According to Eric Sandstrom of Sandstrom and Sons, architects working on the project, the site contains 65,714 square feet of space on the east side. The basement adds an additional 3,000 square feet to the structure.

The school will cost an estimated $2.75 million. Construction of the school will be opened at 8 a.m. Nov. 28 at the Provo School District administration building.

In business, district clerk-treasurer Sheron presented financial reports for the year to the board.

"We're in a good financial position right now," he said. His report indicated that at present the district has a maintenance and operation balance of $100,000.

John W. Wing, Provo School District superintendent, distributed copies of the "Superintendent's Annual Report" to members of the board. Among other things, the report indicated that for the 1977-78 school year the district had one of the lowest teacher-student ratios in years.

"There's still a problem, though," Porter said. "We've hired additional teachers which brought down the ratio, but we still have a shortage of classrooms."

The problem of overcrowding in classrooms is most prevalent at Edgemont, Grandview and Sunset View elementary, he said. "Once Westridge Elementary is completed, it will help alleviate the situation."

The board members also reviewed a letter concerning a bill the Utah School Board Association is preparing to present in the state legislature next February.

The bill would eliminate the tax assessment fee charged by the county clerk's office to the school boards for election and tax collection services. All of the school boards in the USBA are backing the bill.

'Historic site' status sought for courthouse

By MARK WOODLAND
Universe Staff Writer

Utah County Commissioners have voted to make application for the county courthouse to be placed on the National Register of Historic Sites, and are considering a $62,000 proposal to sandblast and treat the limestone face of the building to stop deterioration.

The proposal to nominate the building for the register came from Kathryn MacKay, Utah State Historical Society preservation historian for Utah County.

Utah County's Heritage Foundation, however, expressed "extreme concern" over the idea of sandblasting the building. Craig Call, president of the foundation, asked the county commissioners to delay a decision on the building's renovation until the foundation can bring in experts to examine the building and make recommendations. He said a specialist has been asked to check the courthouse on Dec. 1.

Call, who is involved with the current project to restore historic buildings in downtown Provo, said the sandblasting would result in further deterioration of the building.

"Our concern is the freeze-thaw cycle," Call said. "Sandblasting creates a rough surface that absorbs more water. Then when you seal the sandblasted surface, the water is trapped inside. Rather than deteriorating in sand particles, the limestone will fall apart in chunks."

Call said there are a number of alternatives to sandblasting, including waterblasting and chemical solutions.

Explaining the process of nomination, Ms. MacKay said anything nominated for the National Register must be a man-made structure. "The courthouse was nominated as a significant site within the Provo downtown historical district," she said.

The district extends along Center Street from 300 East East, east on University Avenue between 100 South and 100 North.

Originally, Ms. MacKay suggested that matching federal funds might be available to help renovate the building. "A recent interpretation of an act of Congress changed that," she said. "Apparently any public building will not be eligible for federal grants now."

"The process of nomination begins with historic and cultural research by someone like myself and an architectural historian," she said. "Then we present the proposal to the Utah State Historical and Cultural Sites Review Committee."

There are many historically significant sites in Utah County, Ms. MacKay said. "The R. Spencer Hines home is one example of registered sites in Provo. Hotel Roberts and the Springville Community Church will be nominated next month."

Ms. MacKay said some people use the historic designation for financial gain. "Living within an historic district can increase the value of your property," she said, "but it also increases taxes. It's unusual for historic property to decrease in value, but it does not necessarily increase."

Ms. MacKay said Utah's approach has been to develop a strong state preservation office to do historical and cultural survey work. "Then we encourage cities to revitalize downtown areas, finding new uses for old buildings."

"I think there is a strong sense of history here in Utah — one like places in the South and New England," Ms. MacKay said. "On the other hand, the western experience is one of instant communities, wanting things new because it's new, anything to make a buck."

Student art requested for sale

Organizers of the "Student Art Sale" are seeking artists who are interested in displaying and selling their work.

Amy Bliss, chairwoman of the sale, said the sale will be in the Memorial Lounge, ELWC, Dec. 5-7. This will give artists on campus a chance to offer their work to BYU students, she said.

Applications are available in the ELWC business office on the third floor, ELWC, and the deadline for registration is Nov. 20 at 5 p.m.

During the sale, artists will be responsible for setting the price and arranging the display of their work, Miss Bliss said artists can use tables, backdrops and chairs for their displays. Necessary equipment is available through the ASBYU Culture Office, she said.

Artists should keep their prices reasonable since they will be selling to students, Miss Bliss said, adding that the purpose of the art sale is to help the artists survive financially. "We want to help students recoup some of the enormous expense that they have in art classes. The sale should also help students obtain good art at modest prices," Miss Bliss said.

The ASBYU Culture Office has divided the sale into four categories: painting, graphics, ceramics and crafts. All pieces must be original art and no decoupage, kits or mechanically reproduced prints may be used, Miss Bliss said.

All art will be set up Dec. 5 at 9 a.m. and taken down Dec. 7 at 5 p.m.

Russian family gets OK to emigrate

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union yielded to American pressure and gave permission Wednesday for Jessica Katz and her Jewish activist parents to emigrate, ending their year-long battle to obtain American medical treatment for the baby's rare digestive illness.

The Katz family received a card in the morning mail informing them their exit visas were ready at the passport office. The family has until Dec. 4 to leave for Israel, but probably will proceed directly to the United States.

"We are so surprised, so surprised," Natalya Katz told The Associated Press by telephone. "We've waited so long, and then we almost didn't believe the letter was really here."

The Katz family was one of 18 Soviet families that President Leonid I. Brezhnev promised U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., would be allowed to emigrate. American Jewish organizations also have intervened on Jessica's behalf.

Western diplomats here hailed the development as a "victory" for President Carter's human rights campaign. One source said it was "no coincidence" the visas were issued while an American Senate delegation was visiting Moscow to improve U.S.-Soviet relations.

The Katz family's joy over the good news was mixed with apprehension. Mrs. Katz is pregnant with the couple's second child and is expecting any day what may be a difficult birth. Doctors have told her the baby is in a "bad position," and they advised her not to travel until after the child is born, she said.

"I think it's going to be very difficult to leave before the Soviet imposed deadline," Mrs. Katz said. Katz said he plans to pick up the visa Friday but has not yet set a date for the family's departure. He will pass the passport office $2,000, a fee required by Soviet law for residents who decide to give up their citizenship.

Jessica suffers from malabsorption syndrome, a rare intestinal condition in infants that interferes with digestion.

Graduation reports

Few evaluations picked up

By STEVE WALLIS
Universe Staff Writer

Only 25 percent of the graduation evaluation reports (GER) have been picked up by students since the program began two weeks ago.

"The test run was very successful, but it is disappointing when you provide helpful information that students need, and they don't use it," said Elned D. Peterson, assistant dean of admissions. "It is not surprising that only 25 percent of the forms were picked up, because only 40 percent of the students pick up their grade slips."

The GER, available in college advancement centers on campus, is a computer printout of the classes a student has taken, plus the classes he lacks to graduate in his major.

Five hundred of the 8,000 students who have used the program found problems in their forms. "Most of the problems we were already aware of," Peterson said.

Transfer work from other universities and waiver credits for a major are not reflected in part two of the form, Peterson said, noting that his office plans to input the transfer work, "but it will take time."

College advancement supervisors said the students aren't picking up the forms because they are unaware the GER exists.

"They just don't know they're available," said Larry Taylor, advancement supervisor in the college of Business. "It is a new program and it will take time for students to be familiar with it."

"Students need to be reminded they are available," said Helen Stillman, advancement supervisor in the College of Physical and Computer Science.

Approximately one-third of the students in the college of Business have picked up the forms, said advancement supervisor Peggy Clark. "We appreciate it when students come in, pick up their forms and get their programs straightened out."

Not seeing up the GER reports will be made available to students earlier in the semester.

"They will be available the second or third week in the semester," Peterson said.

The Ricoh XR-1

With so many good buys available on famous name cameras "Why should I buy a Ricoh camera?" you might ask. Or you might say, "The Ricoh XR-1 has a Pentax K mount, why not just buy a Pentax?" Good questions. Here are some good answers.

First, the Ricoh XR-1 has a copal square metal shutter that lasts longer than cloth shutters. The copal square shutter also permits flash exposures at 1/125 of second instead of 1/60. This makes fill-in flash pictures easier.

Second, the full information viewfinder shows you the shutter speed & f/stop in use and tells you which speed is needed in poor light. These features are very helpful to the creative photographer.

Third, multiple exposure. This option is usually only found on very expensive cameras. Multiple exposure permits special effect photography.

FUN WITH PHOTOGRAPHY

by Robert Allen

With the coming of winter the photographic scene shifts indoors. At least in part. Filters can help your camera to make the transition. Let's start with the filters that are useful indoors.

1. BUB — This filter allows you to use daylight film under incandescent light. Without it the pictures would be too red-yellow. Incandescent light is much warmer (redder-yellow) than daylight and film cannot adjust for this difference as easily as your eye can. The BUB filter is best when in color.

2. CCFLB — The name of this filter is color correction fluorescent light. It is a relatively new type of filter and a much needed one because pictures made with daylight film under fluorescent light look even worse than under incandescent light. Before the CCFLB filter came along you just dealt with a practical answer to the problem. It was just green pictures or nothing. The CCFLB filter is a reddish purple color.

There are filters that work the opposite way:

1. 85 or 85A — This filter permits the use of film balanced for tungsten light (type A) in daylight. This is the filter that is built in almost all Super 8 movie cameras. Super 8 film (except type C) is all type A, for artificial (tungsten) light and the built in filter makes your camera more versatile. If you forget to replace the filter when using indoor with a Super 8 movie camera your pictures will be too reddish-yellow as if you were using daylight film. If you film outdoors with type A film and without the 85 filter the pictures will be too blue, which incidentally, really looks bad. The 85 filter is brownish pink in color.

2. CCFLB — This filter permits the use of tungsten film under fluorescent light. The question may come up, what if the light is mixed, daylight and incandescent or fluorescent? A good answer. Generally it's correct for the color light (daylight or fluorescent) so that the pictures will not be too blue or green. It will average out better than if you balance for the tungsten. For some reason pictures that are too warm are more tolerable than the other way around. Incidentally, electronic flash tubes are corrected for use with daylight film without a filter.

In indoor cameras we can ask about filters for indoor use. Filters for back & white photography, special effect filters & lens attachments.

U.S. gobblers on increase

EDITOR'S NOTE: As we sit down to Thanksgiving dinner, we tend to take the turkey for granted. But two decades ago the turkey was disappearing. What follows are a few thoughts on the origin of the bird and its comeback.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Wild turkeys, which graced the first Thanksgiving feast and are America's chief gift to the world of domesticated animals, have made a strong comeback after being threatened with extinction.

The eminent ornithologist, Edward Howe Forbush, once wrote that the turkey "is destined to vanish forever from the earth unless our people begin at once to protect it." As late as 1951, another naturalist reported the turkey gone from 70 percent of its original range and confined largely to the Deep South and the Southwest.

But in less than two decades, this biggest land game bird has spread north once more, and west into areas like Hawaii, where it never gobbled before. Present populations are estimated at well over a million, and there's an annual kill of over 100,000. There are hunting seasons in about 40 states.

When the Pilgrims landed, the turkey was abundant in New England and naive and easy to kill. But it learned quickly, retreating before the white man's guns and axes chopping at the forests. Still it remained so common in some areas that birds were hauled to market by the wagon load, and John James Audubon reported in 1807 that a 25- or 30-pound turkey might be bought in Kentucky for 25 cents.

As the turkey retreated, it got smarter. Alerted to danger by keen eyes and ears, it vanishes into the underbrush before the hunter is likely to get a shot. As one early observer commented: "It can run as fast as a dog, and fly as well as a goose."

Despite their new wariness, the birds dwindled gradually.

Then in the 1950s, Pennsylvania authorities discovered a solution. Birds trapped in the wild and released in suitable habitat elsewhere multiplied nicely. State after state followed suit so that the call of the gobbler was again heard far and wide.

Nuts are mainstays, but turkeys will eat nearly everything, including fruit, berries, seeds, leaves, insects, animals and reptiles. Some are learning about corn and soybeans. It may be that such diets account for the renowned flavor of their roasted flesh.

Buy, sell junk: anything goes

Students can buy and sell their wares Saturday at "A Quality Junk Sale," sponsored by the ASBYU President's Office.

The sale will be 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Wilkinson Center main ballroom.

"This junk sale is a flea market where everyone will have an opportunity to sell anything they want," said Bruce Snow, flea market coordinator.

Snow initiated the idea of having a flea market at BYU when a survey he conducted showed definite student interest in such an event. In September he presented his ideas to ASBYU President Perry Bratt.

"A flea market of this type has been held in the past at BYU," Snow said. "I became interested in the flea market idea after reading a magazine article on the nationwide interest in flea markets."

"A friend of mine is a manager at Alta apartments, and every year at the end of the semester, he and his crew have to haul away truckloads of stuff left by students. This flea market will give everyone a chance to sell some of the things they'd otherwise throw away."

Snow's survey showed more students were interested in buying things than selling, indicating those who are interested in selling would probably be able to sell their goods. Possible items for sale would be used skis, kitchen appliances, baked goods, and furniture.

Those wishing to sell items must sign up for a table at the Wilkinson Center business office, 327 ELWC, by Friday, on a first-come, first-served basis, at a cost of $3 per table.

Key starters Valerie Stout and Becky Ostler fall to the ground after digging for a spike during a conference match. BYU goes into regional action Friday.

Hikers to enter regionals; ranked sixth in national poll

Ranked as the nation's No. 6 volleyball squad, the Cougars' volleyball team enters the Regional tournament at UTEP Friday and Saturday after finishing third in the Intermountain Athletic Conference race with identical 9-3 records. The team has been designated as the third-place team in the conference.

BYU (11-1) claimed the conference championship last weekend after dealing out two losses to previously undefeated Utah State Aggies, who are the No. 3 team in the country, the USU team's season 10-2.

Winner of tonight's match between New Mexico and Northern Colorado, which will determine the tournament's sixth team, will be BYU's opponent at noon Friday. The Cougars will face them on Friday against the Aggies.

ASU and Utah make up the second pool of the tournament. Semifinals are scheduled at noon and 4 p.m. on Saturday, while the consolation and championship matches are slated at 5:30 and 7:30 p.m. The top three teams will have places in the national championships Dec. 7-9 at the University of Minnesota.

BYU Coach Elaine Michaelis said the Cougar's strength lies in their balanced spiking attack. "Opponents can't defend only one of our players because everybody spikes well. The cohesiveness gained through experience makes our team strong."

Following the regional tournament, BYU will travel to Hawaii and Japan for competition. Two matches with the University of Hawaii, the No. 1 team in the nation, have been scheduled. The Japanese matches have been scheduled with the Nippon College and the Hitachi Factory teams. Nippon College is the feeder squad to Hitachi Factory, Japan's renowned women's Olympic team.

Soccercats end year, take second in WAC

The Cougar soccer team concluded its first year of intercollegiate competition Saturday, losing to Colorado 3-1, in a game played in the snow.

1978 marked a new era for the BYU soccer team. Competing for the first time on an official level, the squad compiled a record of nine wins and 14 losses. Despite a slow start, the Cougars took second place in the WAC, and won the Beehive Invitational.

Dusara said he concentrated on defense at the beginning of the season because of the tough schedule. "It took six to eight games before the Cougars' defense seemed to get organized along with the biggest problem," he said. "I knew our biggest problem was going to be in the offense, especially the strikers, who can score the goals," said Dusara.

After a slow start, the team picked up momentum, and won six of its last nine games. Dusara said his offense still has problems but "has improved considerably."

According to Dusara, "preparation for 1979 will begin next week with indoor training sessions."

Dusara said all persons interested in joining the team should report to the west annex of the Smith Fieldhouse at 7 p.m., Nov. 21.

Besides playing indoor soccer, the players will "train in building power, speed and endurance through running and weight training," said Dusara.

Dusara had a young squad this season. He said it "was a real challenge to mold these new players, along with the returning varsity players, into a team which could face up to a 27-game schedule, against some of the top teams in the nation."

BYU faced national powers San Francisco, Chico State, Air Force, U.S. International, and British Columbia. Most of this year's players will be returning next year. "Walk-on players as well as international students will boost the team next year," said Dusara.

Four starters from previous years will return to next year's team, after completing missions. The four, Vonn Black, Robert Vogelsberg, Brad Beall, and Colin Hector, will add experience to the 1979 squad.

Dusara said the Soccer team will have its annual awards banquet on Dec. 6. The dinner is open to the public. Reservations may be obtained by calling BYU Ext. 2546.

Indian athlete attributes success to setting goals and determination

By SARAH LUCAS
Universe Sports Writer

Cougar sophomore Laura Burnham, an Iroquois Indian, has found her niche in life on the hardwood floors of the volleyball court.

Some people are born all-around athletes and Burnham is no exception. She has played almost every sport from an early age, starting with softball and basketball, she quickly developed a desire to compete in track during high school and now concentrates on volleyball.

In high school Burnham played varsity sports and was a starting player in all four sports, lettering three years.

Athletic family
Burnham was born into an athletic family; her father played ice hockey for an Eastern college team, her mother participated in sports during her high school days, and her younger sister is on the junior varsity volleyball team.

"My parents have supported me 100 percent in sports," said Burnham.

She was offered a track scholarship from several different universities, including BYU. "The one thing that influenced me to attend BYU was my best LDS friend, Connie, plus I had an older sister attending BYU."

Enters BYU
"The greatest influence in my coming to BYU is that I knew this school has the best coaching which could help me succeed better in volleyball and high jumping," said Burnham.

Several operations put her out of a whole season in volleyball and ended her career in high jumping.

But Burnham didn't give up, and the next year she played junior varsity volleyball. With a determined mind and the help of a knee brace, she is now on the varsity squad.

Determined player
"Laura is a hard worker with strong determination. Her strongest point is her passing ability. She is a good hitter and defensive specialist," said women's volleyball coach Elaine Michaelis. "Laura is a smart and fast-improving player who will see considerable playing time," Michaelis said.

Burnham began her volleyball career when she was playing church basketball and volleyball. From there, she moved to high school sports, where she got her first taste of competition.

Indian athlete
"As an Indian athlete I am proud to say that I'm an Indian, because I know my Indian heritage is proud of me. There can be a lot more Indian athletes, but I think most of them give up too easily."

Turkey Trot date in error; event to take place today

The Daily Universe erred in a story yesterday which stated that the Intramural Turkey Trot was scheduled for Wednesday. The date for the Trot is today, Thursday.

The Turkey Trot will be run at 4 p.m. today over a 1 and 1/2 mile course. Open to both men and women, the Trot will award six turkeys as prizes to winners of separate divisions. No entry is required.

Participants should meet in the quad between the Richards PE Building and the Smith Fieldhouse.

Last year, 160 participants ran in the Turkey Trot.

The Daily Universe also erred in reporting the deadline for entries for men's handball singles.

The Intramurals Office announced that today is the deadline for entries in the men's handball singles. Play begins Nov. 21.

Deadlines for entries of men's badminton singles is Nov. 20. Play begins Nov. 21.

The Daily Universe regrets the errors.

GOOD YEAR YES, SKIERS, TIEMPO REALLY IS A SNOW TIRE!

PROVED IN HISTORY'S WORST WINTER

$39

Beginning this winter, California chain control crews and enforcement personnel, in mountain areas, will accept the Tiempo radial as a "Snow Tread" tire. That's good news for Tiempo owners. And Tiempo is good news for anyone who's ever tried to put on tire chains!

Tempio proved itself last winter during some of the worst weather in history. In the blizzards of New England, the ice storms of Tennessee, the heavy rains in Texas. Best of all, Tiempo steel belted radials are so tough they keep on rolling season after season. Tiempo is rain tire, snow tire, sun tire... the one tire that does it all!

Tempio. The tire you can drive with confidence!

Women gain new dignity in athletics

CHENBORO, N.C. (AP) — Parents, does your teenage daughter insist on going down to the corner and rough-housing it in football with boys? Is she swinging on the backyard clothesline or leaving her pants when she jumps up to touch the ceiling? Does she want to carry her comb in the hip pocket and yank it out to comb her hair the way the players of the Celtics used to do it? If you despair, Don't go whispering in alarm in the neighborhood. Drop that telephone — no need to call the police. Your daughter is perfectly normal.

The athletic girl today is the All-American. She insists on one of the country's leading sports administrators. She is beginning to realize where she is in modern society and what she is. She is gaining in maturity and self-esteem.

There are no longer any need to feel embarrassed. Whether being a tomboy. There was a time, not so long ago, that a girl might be viewed as a tomboy or a kook if she sought to get into competitive sports.

More. Times have changed. "I am Parsons, assistant athletic director and women's basketball coach at the University of South Carolina," painted the developing picture of the competitive, sports-minded female earlier this year. Parsons is a 30-year-old graduate of Brigham Young University who has been one of the moving forces behind the rapid growth of women's intercollegiate basketball and the assurance of the stigma that is tainted women involved in team sports.

"I've had a hard time of it all my life," the slender, red-haired kid who loved to participate in sports. "I was a source of embarrassment to my mother. I never understood why I was born a girl. I was trying to figure if it was all worthwhile."

Played with the champion Rayton Piperettes of the Women's AAU National Basketball League, then to BYU to get her Masters and decided to pursue her career toward creating a new climate for women in sports.

Parsons credited Billie Jean King and Title IX with changing the women athletes dignity. "I was at the fashion and glamour magazines to see what they said. 'They no longer glorify the pale, thin girl in a slinky gown. They stress the active, outdoor woman.'"

Parsons said. "They no longer glorify the pale, thin girl in a slinky gown. They stress the active, outdoor woman."

Ruggers end year with western tour

In its final matches of the year, the Cougar rugby team defeated St. Mary's College of San Francisco 12-8, but lost 24-6 to the University of California at Davis.

Cougar coach John Seggar said the game against St. Mary's was predictably close. He said they were tied with 12 minutes to go and managed to score with only one minute left.

Although the ruggers did well in San Francisco, Seggar said the match with UCD was a disaster. According to Seggar, the UCD squad utilized a different kind of strategy that the Cougars had not seen this season.

Instead of passing the ball, Seggar said, UCD's strong forwards would carry the ball as far as possible until being tackled, allowing a much stronger, faster offensive attack.

Seggar said UCD's offensive attack collected 20 points during the first half.

Seggar announced a rugby get-together Saturday for anyone interested in participating with the rugby team. Those interested may call Tina at 375-2885 to be informed of time and place of meeting.

Parker slugs way to MVP honor despite broken cheekbone, finger

NEW YORK (AP) — Slugger Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the National League batting champion for the past two years, has been named winner of the NL's Most Valuable Player Award for 1978 by a landslide vote.

The menacing left-handed hitter, who batted .338 in 1977 and .334 this year, collected 21 of a possible 24 first-place votes and a total of 320 points in balloting by a select committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

First baseman Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who did not receive a first-place vote, finished second with 184 votes, edging shortstop Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies. Bowa collected the three first-place votes not accorded to Parker and amassed 189 points.

After Bowa, outfielders took the next four places, with Reggie Smith of the Dodgers fourth with 164 points, followed by Jack Clark of the San Francisco Giants 107, 1977 MVP George Foster of the Cincinnati Reds 104, and Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia 48.

Gaylord Perry of the San Diego Padres, this year's Cy Young Award winner, finished eighth in the MVP balloting with 45 points. Rounding out the top 10 were outfielders Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh and Dave Winfield of San Diego.

"This is the greatest thing that ever happened to me in my baseball career," said the elated Parker, the first Pittsburgh player to win the coveted MVP award since Roberto Clemente in 1965. The only other Pirate player to receive the honor was shortstop Dick Groat in 1960.

In addition to leading the league in batting, the massive 6-5, 235-pound Parker rapped 30 home runs, third behind Foster's 120; tied for second in triples with 12, and stole 20 bases.

"It's nice to send a ball out of the park, but my purpose in playing is to give a good all-around performance and give the people their money's worth," said the 27-year-old Parker, who has batted over .300 each of the last four years.

"My goal for 1979 is to win the Triple Crown, the batting, home run and RBI titles. I got my home run swing going good this year and if I can stay healthy next year, I will shoot for the Triple Crown. I believe in myself," Parker said.

Parker was not completely healthy during the 1978 season. He suffered a broken left cheekbone in home plate collision with catcher John Stearns of the New York Mets during a game on June 30. Surgery was required and there is a permanent wire in Parker's jaw.

After surgery, Parker was playing again in 16 days. To protect the injury, he sometimes wore a football helmet and a goalie's hockey mask when he batted in practice.

The broken cheekbone caused Parker to fall into a batting slump, his average skidding from .315 to .288. But then he regained form and overcame the batting leaders with a late-season rampage.

Earlier in the season, he had played with a broken finger. "With the fractured finger and the broken cheek and doing as much as I have, I'm satisfied. And that satisfaction is the most important thing," Parker said.

was filmed over the

Hero worship

Some 12,000 people gathered there during the three days, according to Capener, who is also director and cinematographer for the documentary. He said it was a strong demonstration of the modern-day hero worship of these rough woodsmen.

"But when it comes right down to it," Capener noted, "what the mountainmen really were, were very enterprising small businessmen."

The production crew
has traveled as far as St.
Louis and Omaha in order to gather and film old artifacts, photographs and paintings showing what these men were really like.

Modern mountainman
"We're going to find a modern-type mountain-man who'll take us up and show us how trapping is done," Capener said.

The script for the program was written by Stephen Taylor, in consultation with Frederick

ABC documentary will replay film clips of rock 'n' roll's best

A hundred of rock 'n' roll's finest moments will be seen on prime time
TV next year on a two-hour ABC special called "Heroes of Rock 'n' Roll," reported Rolling Stone magazine in a recent press release.

Airing Feb. 2, the program may be the most thorough compilation of rock
'n' roll footage ever assembled, Rolling Stone said.

Many of the film clips to be shown on the program have never before been screened. They include clips from movies, British and American TV, and newsreels and personal collections,

Rolling Stone said.

Producer Malcolm Leo said that the show is "the story of the rise of rock 'n' roll, the fall, and the rise again."

Its high points include Elvis Presley performing "Hound Dog" on the Milton Berle show in 1956; the Beatles at Liverpool's Cavern in 1961; and the Rolling Stones with Brian Jones vamping their way through "Jumpin' Jack Flash" for a promo film.

The townspeople in "Pinocchio" parade across the Pardoe stage with Pinocchio (Isaac Thomas) leading them, in a scene from the original musical opening tonight at BYU.

'Pinocchio'

By JULIE ASH
Universe Staff Writer

All lights are dim, except for a spotlight shining in the left hand corner of the stage. The marionettes move spasmodically into place as the piano overture sets the mood for the events to follow.

A sly fox appears in the spotlight and bows his bushy head for the invocation.

"As he raises his head and lifts his tail to exit, director Max C. Golightly says, 'We'll do it twice if that's what it takes.'"

Dress rehearsals for BYU's production of "Pinocchio," opening tonight at 8, were held Tuesday and Wednesday nights and lasted into the wee hours of the morning.

"A musical's dress rehearsal is really the first time to see how everything works together," explained Neil Newell, the music composer for the production. "Changes will occur right up until opening night. We haven't had to rewrite the script, but a lot of cutting had to be done. We thought we could fit everything, the entire story of Pinocchio, into the play."

The writer and director of the production, Golightly, has a personal attachment to the story of Pinocchio. "I grew up with Pinocchio," Golightly says. "I lost both my parents at a young age and was a lonely child. The original book was like a friend to me and in adapting 'Pinocchio' for the stage we tried to stay strictly within the original version."

Golightly, honorary member of the Louisiana Poetry Society in New Orleans, describes the story of Pinocchio as "the story of a bond between a lonely woodcarver and a small wooden marionette who wants so much to be a real boy, but keeps running away from his problems."

"Inside each of us is the child," Golightly says. "A little frightened, a bit unsure, and wanting very much to find somewhere, someone to love." Composer Newell says he has a high regard for Golightly and adds, "Max has a reputation for turning out beautiful shows. He directed 'Sweet Redemption,' which was the longest running musical at BYU, and to him, 'Pinocchio' is a labor of love."

There are also many others who can relate to the story of Pinocchio, as evidenced by the fast rate of ticket sales.

"I don't really know why, but six out of 14 shows have already been sold out," said Charles Henson, the business manager for the Theater and Cinematic Arts Department and the set designer for "Pinocchio."

Put an animated set, full of fantasy, together with costume designer Janet Swenson, who made it possible for Pinocchio's nose to really grow when he lies; add a lively choreographer, Candy

"Pinocchio" director and writer Max C. Golightly says, "I grew up with Pinocchio. The original book was like a friend to me."

Foley, who helps Isaac "remember he's a marionette and his joints are uncontrollable"; include composer Newell and musical arranger Karen Null; involve a lead actor who could tell the entire story through his eyes and facial expression, plus other actors and actresses who bring to life the classic fairytale; and finally add a director who is devoted to his script and his audience.

You then have a production which promises to be an evening full of fun, music, laughter, and even lessons to be learned. Tickets for the performances are still available from the drama ticket office in the Harris Fine Arts Center.

Y Philharmonic recording to air on nationwide radio

A concert recording of BYU's Philharmonic Orchestra will be broadcast Nov. 21 at 2:05 p.m. and Nov. 26 at 10 p.m. over KBYU-FM (88.9), announced KBYU-FM program director Walter Rudolph.

The recording is being broadcast this fall over National Public Radio (NPR) stations throughout the country, Rudolph said.

The BYU Philharmonic's tape is one of 13 orchestral recordings chosen from tapes representing numerous schools of higher learning across America. Director Ralph G. Laycock was notified of the honor in July.

The 13 recordings were chosen for NPR's classical music series, "Campus Musica." The series is being aired Oct. 31 over many of the nation's NPR stations.

The recording was made during the Philharmonic's April 6 concert in the delong Concert Hall, HFAC. Most of the concert was taped for the NPR series.

The tape includes Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man," Elgar's "Enigma Variations," and Debussy's

"La Mer (Movements 1 and 2)."

Also on the tape are Tchaikovsky's "Violin Concerto (Movement 1)," Bradshaw's "Peace Memorial," and Strauss's "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks."

Other schools to be represented in "Campus Musica" include Drake University, Northwestern University, and Wisconsin, Yale.

University of Southern California, University of Cincinnati and University of Iowa.

Tapes were evaluated on their technical quality and judged for their performance quality and musical content.

KBYU-FM's Robert Tate and BYU Sound Services' Jon Holloman made the BYU recording. Rudolph was the executive producer.

Now comes the $20 million "Star Trek" movie in production with the original cast from the TV series. It costs more than all 79 episodes.

William Shatner, who plays Capt. James Kirk, says, "I think we will have a first class movie. It's so far ahead of the series. It's a galactic jump."

Leonard Nimoy, in his Vulcan makeup, says, "Mr. Spock is essentially the same person, but with different postures and attitudes because of the passage of time. So rather than hide the fact, we try to use it."

A visit to the "Star Trek" set is like stepping into a science fiction Disneyland. Special passes are required for the guarded set — one man was convicted recently of stealing its plans and selling copies for $75 each.

For the movie, the Enterprise has been remodeled. The new ship makes the TV version look like a Cracker-Jack prize. The bridge is completely computerized, and display screens show special tapes and films from NASA and other scientific agencies.

"They never showed Earth in the 23rd century on the series. The script has a sequence where we pick up Kirk in San Francisco. He's now an admiral and is on his way to lead for command of a special mission of the Enterprise. Every time I heard they wanted to cut that I screamed. I think it is very important to show Earth," says director Robert Wise. Wise said he didn't hesitate to do a movie based on a television series or to use the actors from the series. "I don't feel there's that much difference between television and movie acting," he says. "Both Shatner and Nimoy have fine stage backgrounds. What I'm finding unique is coming onto a project and finding the actors have played the roles before and are so familiar with their characters."

The details of the plot are secret. It's still an action adventure story, with strong character development and the series' strong philosophy of tolerance, optimism and hope. Mr. Spock will be seen on his native planet of Vulcan, there is a spectacular battle with the Klingons, and there will be encounters with aliens.

John Wayne and Claire Trevor star in John Ford's "Stagecoach," the story of how the Ringo Kid changes the lives of passengers in a stagecoach inching across the desert.

Dance, screen combine

The University of Utah Departments of Modern Dance and Architecture will sponsor an evening of film performance, by the Minneapolis-based team of filmmaker Molly Davies and dancer Sage Cowles, Nov. 21 at 8 p.m. in the Dance Building Theater, Room 208.

This unique collaboration of dance and film, titled "Sage Cycle," is composed of three varying sections. The first, called "Sage and Time Again," is a black and white film shot in a Minneapolis studio. It has been described as a dream which questions: Where is the real Cowles — on stage or on screen?

"Grasslands and Sage," a color film shot at the Sand Lake Wildlife Refuge in South Dakota, has been called an "absolute joy" by Donald J. Hutera in the Twin Cities Reader.

The third section, "Sage Cycle Third Thought," uses John Cage's 1976 score, "Quartets for 24 Instruments."

The presentation was initiated by Ms. Davies as a show of love for Ms. Cowles. Says Ms. Davies, "My concerns were conceptual and technical, while Sage made decisions about what to do in the spaces on film and on stage. The locations are all places where Sage feels 'close to the bone.'"

Tickets can be purchased at the door the evening of the performance. For more information call 581-7327.

Film Society to show John Wayne classic

"Stagecoach," the Western classic that elevated John Wayne from obscure serial cowboy to top-draw movie star, is part of this week's offering from BYU Film Society.

Film Society Director Monica Jensen said "Stagecoach" was Wayne's first big success after 10 years as prince of sagebrush at Saturday matinees. The 1939 film was also the first of 14 movies he would make with noted director John Ford.

Because it was Ford's first Western in 10 years, few people expected "Stagecoach" to be the success it was. "Yet it remains one of the best and most famous Westerns ever made," said Miss Jensen.

The film tells of eight stagecoach passengers who suddenly find themselves attacked by Indians. Filmed in Monument Valley, a favorite location to which Ford returned for subsequent Westerns, "Stagecoach" is climaxed by an exciting Apache chase across the Arizona salt flats, Miss Jensen said.

A second feature to be shown is "Miracle at Morgan's Creek," a 1944 satire of shotgun weddings. The film stars Betty Hutton and Eddie Bracken, Miss Jensen said.

Showtimes will be Friday and Saturday at 6:30, 8, and 9:30 p.m.

Outlook for 'entrepreneurs' optimistic, executive says

By TIMOTHY HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The entrepreneur — is he a relic or a sleeping star? — was the question posed by Wednesday's Executive Lecture guest speaker.

Entrepreneur in today's business world, said H. W. Milner, president and chief executive officer of Pick Hotels Corp., is "anyone holding a management position and having control over key decisions."

Former exempted speculators and investors from the 1920s in entrepreneurial positions. He also said members are excluded because they have no control over capital.

Attributing the qualities of the entrepreneur, Milner said, "He doesn't just sit in the way of opportunity, he creates opportunity."

Entrepreneur is a "resourceful man who knows how to think, and does think." He controls his environment. He is one who lives in a dynamic and insecure world full of risks, yet he deals with risk and relaxes in the face of it," he said.

After said the entrepreneur is able to take different opinions and pieces of advice from other people and turn it into a decision and a way of action.

Entrepreneurships in the Utah House of Representatives will be discussed at a Friday meeting of the Utah State Constitution Revision Committee.

Sen. Karl N. Snow, committee chairman and BYU professor, said the meeting is open to the public. Students and faculty are invited to attend any portion of the session, 9 a.m.-noon and 1-2 p.m. in 347 ELWC.

Snow said the committee will discuss reapportionment of the state legislature since the present apportionment has been declared unconstitutional, and will discuss the need for revision of Article 13 of the state's constitution in light of recent public concern over state and local tax burdens.

"It's a monthly committee meeting usually held each month on a different college campus," said Bruce Dunn, graduate assistant to Snow.

Dunn said the public is encouraged to observe the meeting and can direct questions to senators during break periods.

The entrepreneur functions in a capitalistic society or in one where the owners of capital control the system. "He works best in a dynamic world with rapid change and massive obsolescence," Milner said.

Milner said the entrepreneur was lulled to sleep during the post-World War II era because an excess of capital in U.S. industry grew and became stable until the mid-1960s, when the excess capital was used and interest rates rose.

He said the stability in industry and high interest rates have caused enormous amounts of obsolescent goods and materials because of the inability to finance growth.

Milner said the outlook for the entrepreneur is "optimistic" because the entrepreneur can demonstrate that today's problems "are only symptoms for solution of the problems."

Milner said students wishing to serve in entrepreneurial roles should carefully consider motivational factors and "should not be motivated by the fear of failing."

He said they should establish goals and work on self-discipline and self-control to achieve those goals. They should also prepare themselves and leave as little as possible to chance."

The Orem City Council has granted approval for construction of a power line along 800 East to Signetics Corp., favoring the advent of more than 500 new jobs and a fattened city tax base over the objections of city residents who oppose the line.

The agreement, concluded after a week of council meetings after three weeks of negotiations with Utah Power & Light (UP&L), residents on 800 East, and Signetics, leaves two options open to finance the 46,000-volt line.

Hoping to reach an agreement satisfactory to all groups, Signetics, a computer parts plant, agreed to wait 30 days while Orem attempts to solicit state and federal funds to help pay the increased cost of putting the line underground.

The motion, which was passed unanimously by the city council after much debate, says if a commitment for funds cannot be obtained, UP&L has permission to install the line on the originally proposed overhead route on the east side of 800 East.

Property owners along the route, who object to the poles necessary for an overhead line, had previously been unable to reach a favorable settlement on right of way in negotiations with UP&L. But none of the property owners attended Tuesday's meeting.

The line was originally requested by Signetics to accommodate additional equipment to be purchased by the company.

Universe approves line

If the line is constructed underground, it will cost "in excess of $200,000," according to UP&L officials.

"We're willing to pay more for the line," said the finance and administration manager at Signetics. "We want to be good neighbors as well as being a part of the city's growth plans."

Legislature, taxes topic of meeting

Reapportionment of the Utah State Legislature and the need for revision of a constitution article dealing with Utah tax structures will be discussed at BYU in a Friday meeting of the Utah State Constitution Revision Committee.

Artist Mitch Taguchi lines up three small crane replicas he made from quarter-inch squares of paper. The smallest replicas contain 15 folds each, the same number used in the larger to the right.

Smallest origami in world created by Japanese student

Some people consider short-sightedness a handicap, not Mitch Taguchi. His myopia enables him to see all the details necessary to create some of the smallest origami artwork in the world.

Working, along with origami from other artists, on display on the fifth floor of the Harold B. Lee Library. The exhibit will be open to the public until the end of November.

The display includes frogs that leap when touched, a boat, ducks, a shrimp, birds, a cat, a dog and a seven-tiered pagoda. Each takes a quarter-inch square piece of paper and a tiny crane figure with 15 folds, measuring five millimeters from wing tip to wing tip.

Junior, majoring in business, said origami is an ancient Japanese art of folding paper to make various shapes. He began learning the art from his grandfather in Japan when he was only two.

He said it helps improve dexterity and coordination. "I admit that working with such fine detail makes some people 'climb the walls,'" he said. "I didn't begin his work with mini-origami until he came to the United States eight years ago and decided to become a watchmaker. 'If I hadn't

Snakes donated to Y

The two largest prairie rattlesnakes ever found have been donated to the Monte L. Bean Life Science Museum and are currently on display near the north entrance of the museum.

A live measurement of the two "crotalus viridis viridis" specimens found them to be 59 inches in length, said Dr. Douglas Cox, manager of the Bean Museum.

Cox said snakes are measured after death to record the official length because of a tendency to stretch out when dead. When the two snakes die, approximately six inches can be added to their current length, he said.

The previous record for prairie rattlesnakes "was somewhere in the neighborhood of 56 inches," Cox said.

The snakes were donated to the museum by Jim and Deanna Birkholm, owners of the Montana Rattlesnake Co. Inc., which claims to be the largest rattlesnake dealer in the world, he said.

"The company is in business to sell rattlesnake venom to scientific companies and other commercial institutions," he said.

Describing the danger of such a snake, Cox said, "The viridis species is not the most venomous of rattlesnakes, but it is not the least venomous either."

He said two factors are involved in determining the potential danger of the snake venom — the toxicity of the venom and the volume of venom a snake can deliver.

The prairie rattlesnake is fairly toxic; however, the real danger results from the large size of the snake and its ability to deliver large amounts of venom when it strikes.

The two snakes displayed at the museum were milked of most of their venom before being delivered to the museum. Cox said an electrical stimulus is used to obtain the venom from the snake, which is "a rather painful, merciless process" for the snake.

"Given sufficient time, the snakes will recover and be able to begin producing venom again," he added.

The two rattlesnakes are currently being used for display purposes, but one will later be sent to the serology department of the Veterans' Hospital in Salt Lake City for continued research on that particular species.

The new addition brings the total number of live snakes on display to six, and several more, which are kept for teaching purposes, are kept in another part of the museum.

The two snakes were caught in Montana near the Canadian border.

Dr. Douglas Cox, manager and curator of reptiles for the Monte L. Bean Life Science Museum, carefully examines the record-length prairie rattlesnake donated by a Montana couple.

Tomcat causes dispute

SEATTLE (AP) — What price tag can be placed on a mixed-breed tomcat named Sascha who came to an untimely end at the age of 67? A King County Superior Court jury is being asked to decide that question.

Sascha's owners, Dr. Jan Spiegel and his mother, Louise, filed suit after the cat died last year, saying his death was caused by the negligence of veterinarian Dr. William Sudduth.

Sudduth told the jury last week he did everything possible, including resuscitating the cat after a cardio-pulmonary arrest and performing a tracheotomy to restore breathing. Sascha died a day or so later.

The owners' claim for $30,000 each for "pain and suffering as a result of the loss of a loved family member" was dismissed last spring.

Law students place high in contest

By TIMOTHY HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Six students from the J. Reuben Clark Law School demonstrated their legal talents by placing second and third at the National Moot Court Regional Competition in Denver.

The competition, sponsored by the New York Bar Association, hosted 11 three-man teams representing six law schools in the Western Region of the U.S., said Dennis M. Richardson, chairman of the board of advocates. The board is the directing body of the moot court program.

The team which placed second in the Nov. 9-11 regionals is comprised of third-year law students Kevin E. Monson of Diamond Bar, Calif., Jeffrey A. Dahl of Salt Lake City, and Richard M. Hymas of Orem. They are qualified to compete in the national finals in New York, Jan. 29-31.

A team from the University of New Mexico Law School placed first, defeating the BYU team by less than one point. Other law schools represented included Arizona, Arizona State, Utah, and Colorado, Richardson said.

"This is the highest finish BYU teams have ever had," Hymas said. "It's the first time a team from BYU has qualified to compete in the national finals."

The BYU team placing third included Myrna L. South from Menan, Idaho; James E. Lund of Escondido, Calif., and Alan L. Bugg of Loveland, Colo., also third-year law students.

"The moot court is a mock appellate hearing before the United States Supreme Court," Monson explained. The attorneys argue their case before several judges. There are no witnesses or juries involved, he said.

Richardson said two members of each team present the case before the Supreme Court by writing a legal brief, which is "a written composition of what the case is about," he said.

The case presented to the teams for the competition was of moral competition, but second in writing the brief. The score on the brief was low enough to bring them down just below the team from New Mexico," Richardson said.

An individual award was given to Dahl for being named the best oral advocate in the regional competition, he said.

The winners of the 10 other regions which will be competing in the finals, Richardson said, have not yet been announced, however, "the finals will include the top law schools in the nation."

Lund, a member of the third-place finishers, said, "National Moot Court competition is the most prestigious competition for all law schools."

Alcohol payoffs to be examined by federal board

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says millions of dollars in cash and other illegal gifts are being distributed to bars and wholesalers by beer, wine and liquor manufacturers and distributors.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said Monday it is beginning a two-year investigation of major manufacturers and distributors suspected of violating alcohol marketing laws by giving payoffs to store operators who agree to stock their products.
